Dear Bill:

On Tuesday, April 30th, at one of our ABA breakfasts at the University Club I have persuaded Frank Barnett to be our speaker. Breakfast starts at 8 -- the program about 8:30. There will be an overflow crowd, as all of NSIC's Board and its donors have been invited. Judge Webster has indicated his intention to attend and a host of others. I have enclosed the formal announcement with the title of the talk.

As the founding director of NSIC we in the ABA would like to have lawyer Casey come and introduce F.R.B., for without you, there wouldn't be such an organization. I have also asked Justice Powell who is the founding father of our ABA Committee from which NSIC was a spin-off. Please have one of your people call me [(804) 296-4362] or Mary Lee [(202) 543-4994] if you can accept. We would be thrilled.

Sorry I missed you at the Chevy Chase Club last night

All the best,

Bill

Dear Colleague:

Frank Rockwell Barnett, the president of the National Strategy Information Center and educational consultant to our committee of the ABA since its inception, will be the next and final speaker in our spring breakfast series. Rhodes Scholar Barnett has chosen as his subject "'Plus Ca Change, . . .'" Reflections on Anniversaries, Detentes and the Leninist Legacy." That title harkens back to the original name of our committee - the Committee on Education About Communism and Its Contrast With Liberty Under Law. Our audience may rest assured of an educational sketch of the history of our relationship with the Soviet Union and its allies.

The National Strategy Information Center, which I have the honor to serve as vice president and general counsel, has made many and great contributions to education about national security in its 23-year history - to "special operations," to intelligence, to resource war, to the budget, to the aims, objectives and practices of our adversaries - the list is endless! Its founding director was a humble New York lawyer named Bill Casey, joined with another humble lawyer named Morry Leibman. Come and hear Frank Barnett on Tuesday, April 30, at 8 a.m., at the University Club, 1135 16th Street N.W.

An acceptance/regrets card is enclosed. Please reply by April 24.

Sincerely,

W.C. Mott
